Moines writer Colleen Bradford Krantz.

The 1-hour film will be shown at The Figge Art Museum in downtown Davenport on Sunday, October 10th at 2:00 pm.

Admission is free and donations are encouraged to support Storytellers International, the non-profit organization that produced the film.

Film synopsis: When the bodies of eleven Central Americans and Mexicans were found inside a freight car in Denison, Iowa, the nation took notice. This documentary offers an honest, yet compassionate look at the 2002 railcar deaths of the eleven undocumented immigrants. The film is part crime story, part immigration perspective. It breaks free of the standard immigration story in examining the case from various viewpoints: that of one victim's New York brother, a long-time immigration agent, and a train conductor imprisoned for working with the smugglers who locked the railcar to throw off U.S. Border Patrol inspectors.
