2010 Census Was Generally Accurate But Disproportionately Overlooked Minorities According To New Analysis

- The 2010 census missed more than 1.5 million minorities after struggling to count black Americans, Hispanics, renters and young men, but was mostly accurate, the government said Tuesday.
- The Census Bureau released an extensive assessment of its high-stakes, once-a-decade headcount of the U.S. population.
- Based on a sample survey, the government
